From the Research and Training Center for Children's Mental Health, Tampa, Florida...

This News brief alerts you to (a) an article in Clinical Child and Family Psychology Review and (b) a series of articles in the Special Section of Psychiatric Services on research on the mental health needs of Latino and Hispanic youth and their families. The first article, by Coatsworth et al., “describes the theoretical and empirical foundations of Familias Unidas, a multilevel, family-centered intervention designed to prevent problem behavior in Hispanic adolescents” (p. 113). The special section of Psychiatric Services consists of four papers that identify disparities in mental health care for Latinos; each paper develops strategies to improve services for this ethnic group.
